

Dear Neil Stock

I heard this morning that there is a suggestion that OFCOM is considering putting Cornwall together with most of Devon to create a "south west regional" FM station, and that you are asking for comment on the idea.

I am the Managing Director of Watson-Marlow Bredel Pumps in Falmouth, and it is my opinion and experience that Cornwall and Devon cannot be lumped together and called the "South West". The cultural differences are huge, and such a compromise would please few people and certainly no-one who would call themselves Cornish.

Christopher Gadsden