I feel that there is no way that Ofcom can possibly decide that FM transmissions can be turned off until DAB Radio quality is, at the very least, on a par with FM. I must admit that I was astonished to hear of these proposals, and wonder how you could possibly justify such action at the present moment in time.

Is it the case that the Government wants to sell off the frequencies, as other than that, I cannot for the life of me see why anyone would propose this action?
