Hello [REDACTED],

I am not sure if [REDACTED]'s PA [REDACTED] has been in contact with you today but we need to cancel the meeting with you tomorrow. We are still going through the responses so we feel it would be better to reschedule to next week if that is ok?

Regards

Dear [REDACTED],

I am writing to apologise for a mistake that we have made concerning the submission you provided.

As requested the response removed references to the Home Office from the response and was published on the Ofcom website under name withheld https://www.ofcom.org.uk/data/assets/pdf_file/0028/97624/Name-Withheld.pdf. Unfortunately in the metadata of the file the Home Office name and author were visible. This was removed as soon as we were aware of this however a number of the interested parties are now aware of your response.

Once again I would like to apologise for this error.

Regards

[REDACTED],

We have received a press query this morning asking why the Investigatory Powers Unit in the Home Office is contributing anonymously to this consultation. The cover sheet which we sent did accidentally suggest the organisation should be withheld but this was not our intention. We have subsequently agreed that our published response could be shared as part of potential legal proceedings and attributed to the Investigatory Powers Unit in the Home Office.

We would be grateful if you could arrange for the response to be updated so that the title of the document is changed from "name withheld" to the Home Office and if the document can be updated and attributed to the Investigatory Powers Unit, Home Office.

In order to avoid any issues with the press query we would be grateful if this could be updated as a matter of urgency.

Any problems please let me know.

Regards
