Freedom of Information: Right to know request

Thank you for your request for information regarding fibre optic deployment in UK cities.

This was received by Ofcom on 2 January 2019 and it has been considered under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 (the Act).

You asked:

I need the total length of fibre cable that is deployed by any UK operator in FTTH deployment type in any UK urban city.

I don't need the name of the operator, just the length of fibre and name of city. Example: 65,000km of fibre for the city of London.

Ofcom does not hold this information. However, CityFibre does provide the length of its network for each area it serves at the following link: <https://www.cityfibre.com/network/>.

If you have any queries, then please contact information.requests@ofcom.org.uk. Please remember to quote the reference number above in any future communications.

Yours sincerely,

Catriona Lawrence
