

Dear Sir

I would like to recommend that BBC and ITV are given consent for Euro 2016 Football due to the success of the recent six nations rugby arrangement where they clubbed together in a cost sharing deal. There is also a lack of football on mainstream television apart the excellent Match of the day for a Saturday night free to air audience. If coverage is shared terrestrially. I believe BSkyb are too powerful in the Pay TV and football rights market, which I know to my cost a Sports subscriber. The cost of Subscriptions rises every year to subsidise football, ignoring terrestrial viewers and those who cannot afford Sky, not forgetting fans of other sports, and those who do not live in a premiership club area. Sky do cover Championship football as title sponsors but do not over Bristol City or Rovers much. (My area Portishead North Somerset.

Yours Sincerely

Ian Wallace
