Dear Sara Winter

re: 2009 Ofcom Access services review

Audio description is a brilliant service that has completely revolutionised our families enjoyment of television. It's a narrative that describes the action, body language, facial expressions or scenery - all things that I have to personally describe to my son instead of enjoying the programme personally.

I understand the Ofcom Access Services review includes three options for the future of audio description. I am requesting that Ofcom choose option two and increase audio description to 20% across all channels.

There are nowhere near enough audio described programmes, and the ones that aren't are a pain to watch because I have to keep narrating to my son and end up missing things myself!

Please take onboard my request for an increase of audio description to 20 per cent.
