Question 1:Do you agree that Ofcom should grant approval to Royal Mail for the Delivery to Neighbour service? If not please explain your answer. :

No, I think the Delivery To Neighbour scheme should be rejected permanently. My present neighbours are ok but I still do not want them involved in any of my correspondence thank you very much, and I am quite certain a huge number of people think the same too.

People also have a right to not get along with their neighbours if they don't want to - it s a freedom thing, its being treated like an adult thing.

As for these objections supposedly being covered by the 'right' to opt-out by using a sticker on your door ? Do me a favour, this is to use draconian go along with the policy or declare your sad, non-compliance to the outside world tactics. Sporting such a sticker is also a bit of an insult to your neighbour should they need to call at your door for something.

Sadly, approval of the delivery to neighbour proposals will therefore amount to the postal service and government to intruding into neighbourly arrangements which should be arrived at freely and naturally. When will government stop manipulating and intruding in this way ? These issues are fundamental and no amount of extra convenience or money-saving by the postal service should be allowed to carry any weight on the subject what so ever. many things in life are much, much more important than money, and one of them is freedom.

Question 2:Are there other consequences following the roll out of the service across the UK that we have not included in our assessment? If so, please explain.:
