

I support Royal Mail leaving items with a neighbour. A card should be put through the addressee's door informing them where the item has been left so that they know who to go and see to claim their item of post. This will be of great benefit and prevent a lot of stress and worry to people like me who do not hear very well and have often missed important mail because I have not heard the postman ring my doorbell. He has then taken birthday cards etc back to the depot and I have been so upset not to have received them on the day I was supposed to.
