

Hello,

I am just writing to let you know my view on the use of audio description on television.

Basically, "the more the merrier" as far as I am concerned. Audio description is a fantastic way of bringing television to life. It gives me the ability to enjoy watching television with my family without having to pester them to describe what action is taking place when the dialogue doesn't give that information. I absolutely love audio description and wish that a lot more programmes had this option.

I do, however, not think that all types of programme need audio description, for example, Question Time and similar programmes are perfectly clear without additional description.

Please, please, please can we have 20% of audio description on all digital channels.
