

Without a broadband universal service obligation that requires provision of a high speed download and upload service (>15Mbit/s and >3Mbit/s respectively) broadband providers will continue to discriminate against rural users. This discrimination is as bad as any other form of discrimination.