

Dear Sir/Madam,

I object to the changes to the licence obligation changes proposed by 'London Live'. The purpose of the service was portrayed to be to provide a local TV service for London. The name chosen by the licensee implies that a large proportion of the content will be 'live'. Yet, in fact a large proportion of programming is repeats that could (and already do) appear on a number of other channels.

If the licensee feels they are unable to live up to the (already limited) obligations of their licence, they should surrender the licence and allow another organisation to have a go.

Regards

David Richards
