

Yes most definately. It's crucial they cover a whole range of topics for the community which are very pertinent and of interest. Its a way of reaching people with information who would find it difficult to access that information otherwise, particularly those housebound because of disability and age.