

Typically badly thought out laws where you are considered guilty unless you prove you are not. Worse you limit how you can be innocent and presume people who support such things as bt's openzone are guilty if someone uses that service without your knowledge to download copywrite material. And the stupid greedy £20.00 to prove you are innocent just shows how tory like you have become not caring about the customer only intrested in how to screw them out of yet more money and ignoring the fact we used to be innocent untill PROVEN IN A COURT OF LAW as being guilty.

Just another sad day in britain as it rushes towards a dictatorship lead by fools the greedy and those who dont understand what they control.
