

I am concerned that the current proposals put the providers of shared lines in danger of prosecution. It will prompt providers to think again about such things and slow down the joined up world. I am not aware of carriers of physical goods being liable after carrying goods that the receiver is not legally entitled to. Just because the provider is perhaps the last identifiable part of the communication chain does not mean that they should then be guilty.