

I make occasional use of public wireless networks provided by local businesses. I am worried that public wi-fi networks will disappear because the businesses who operate them will be liable for any copyright infringements which take place on them. The proposed Digital Economy Act does not make it clear how public networks can be provided without liability residing with the provider.