Your comments:

On reading your proposals for 2011 / 2012 I see that noting is being done to improve the reception/capacity of the digital TV and DAB radio from relay stations in the South West. I live in Beer in Devon which is in a small valley, As such we cannot receive digital signals via the main transmiitter at Stockland and have to use a small relay station above Beer.

Unfortunatly this relay station has limited capacity and we can only receive 50% of the digital TV programs and no DAB.

If OFCOM are encouraging a new fibre optic network perhaps they should first start in the poor reception area's or upgrade the relay stations to full capacity!

We are in the 21st Century!
