Additional comments:

I object to the DEAct on the principle that it is a poor law, that has been inadequately thought through and not properly debated by parliament; consequently it is felt to be invalid and unrepresentative by the populace. This in turn undermines it's application and makes it largely impractical to enforce. Furthermore it is a result of a knee-jerk reaction to a situation which has been allowed to get out of hand by the industry: this type of approach does not create good or viable laws.
