No ofcoms approach is totally blinkered.

You cannot discriminate on who reports on downloaders it is all or none.

If certain activities are deemed wrong then it is up to the provider to protect thier product.

No

You are declaring that downloading specific data is punishable to the point of being illegal.

You cannot declare that if you download from certain ISP,S you are guilty,but if you download from others you are not,it is all or nothing.It is like saying if i have a Ford and is caught speeding i will be fined,but if i have a Morgan i wont.

Also if you obtain copyright material on the net then all occurrences would be illegal,you cannot nitpick and say we will catch all the catchable people,the easy ones to find,but all the others just carry on.All you want to do is catch the easy ones,the people you want to catch will just wriggle away.

Question 5.4: Do you believe we should add any additional requirements into the draft code for the content of the notifications? If so, can you provide evidence as to the benefits of adding those proposed additional requirements? Do you have any comments on the draft illustrative notification (cover letters and information sheet) in Annex 6?:

Yes the requirements would be that all ISP,s have to provide information,no matter who they are.Also that all broadcasters of copyable material would have to provide information of who could be copying thier broadcasts ie:-tv and radio.

There is no difference if i copy from radio or from tv or the internet.

As far as providing content for recording the BBC are as guilty as a Torrent site.

Question 6.1: Do you agree with the threshold we are proposing? Do you agree with the frequency with which Copyright Owners may make requests? If not, please provide reasons. If you favour an alternative approach, please provide supporting evidence for that approach. :
