

Question 1: Which of the three options do consultees favour, and why?:

Option 2 - because I don't just watch the BBC channels. I watch other channels and would want to see audio description on as many channels as possible.

Question 2: Do consultees have any further suggestions for future access service provision? If so please provide the rationale for these suggestions:

I don't like the current trend with when a programme finishes and the credits go into a split screen promoting the next programme. It is annoying and difficult if you did want to read the credits.

The main thing is that if you don't have a visual impairment, you have access to dozens and dozens of programmes but, if you are visually impaired, there is only a tiny percentage with audio description so you don't have as much access as a sighted person.
