

Question 1: Which of the three options do consultees favour, and why?:

Option 2. I believe that Ofcom should follow the RNIB's recommendations. Increasing the current audio description requirement to 20% would hugely improve blind and partially sighted people's television experience. It is not a very large proportion of output and completely feasible. Due to the nature of modern digital and satellite television, with its hundreds of channels, it is insufficient to apply these rules only to the 10 Public Service Broadcasters.

Question 2: Do consultees have any further suggestions for future access service provision? If so please provide the rationale for these suggestions:

Comments: