

Question 1: Which of the three options do consultees favour, and why?:

Option 2

This option will greatly increase the viewing pleasure of visually impaired across all broadcasting networks. At present, some broadcasters are transmitting at 10% and above, but this does not include repeats. Giving 20% output on all channels will greatly expand the viewing options.

Question 2: Do consultees have any further suggestions for future access service provision? If so please provide the rationale for these suggestions:

W

Comments:

With BBC I Player's new feature of giving AD on some programmes, it would be great if all of the main 5 were able to provide this. I also believe that the AD provision does not fall in to any category that Ofcom have control. This now digital age should cover all aspects of TV output on whatever format.
