I am not going to answer any of the questions below, I have one simple point - with this proposal you say you are trying to improve competition of live broadcasted games for pay TV; but has anyone stopped to think who is being affected by this? The majority of football fans who like to watch any game that they can (or a specific teams games) would prefer just to pay one subscription to one supplier rather than multiple (as has been the case recently with sky and setanta). All this proposal is going to achieve is to split the rights between multiple suppliers which is FAR worse than the current so called monopoly of premier league football rights. I am not disagreeing that sky sports for example should be available on other suppliers for a fair price, but preventing the one company who are by far the best at broadcasting football is actually detrimental to the quality of available content! Improving competition in this case will not reduce prices it will increase them for football fans (unless by some magic the subscription for each broadcaster is halved).

Thanks

David
