

I think it is a daft idea for the 111 number, how are members of the public supposed to differentiate about urgent and non-urgent care. After they may be panicking and most will not have the skills to recognise the difference in the situation of urgent and non-urgent, all they will be wanting is for someone to come and look at the patient ASAP.