Comments:

As a community media producer, I am writing to respond to this review.

I am concerned that the review does not consider widening out the definition of who is a public service broadcaster or public service content maker.

There can be no doubt that community based media projects, whether broadcasting or online, are producers of public service content. This is also true of commercial local television broadcasters.

Therefore we urge Ofcom and the DCMS to consider funding models which include all producers of public service content, not just the incumbent national television producers.
