Comments:

i believe it is incorrect to assume the rateable value of a pub should dictate the price of sky tv. i have operated several venues in the north of the country with bigger capacity than my present venue and yet i pay double what i would have paid in the northern pubs. i feel it is this inequality which proves that sky are charging what they think they can rather than charging a fair rate for their product, after all their costs are the same no matter what part of the country i live in. ie my telephone, water, gas electric and tv license are not dictated by my location
