

Alfred John Benson

I am now 74 years old.

Since 1997 I have used my, primitive, web pages to push the local council (Islington) into undertaking much needed action to curb anti-social behaviour nearby.

Letters, telephone calls and a complaint to the Local Government Ombudsman had no effect.

Once the target is a suitable politician and he becomes aware of the possible damage being done to their party, things start to move!

I have also just produced a web site for another retired gentleman to be called "Parking Protest Party" who also cannot get a response from the same Council.

It should go online this month at [web address removed]

He will operate it from his computer and add to it himself with a little tuition.

We are also linking with an increasing number of other protest web pages. It is probably the only way to produce any action and I am sure it will expand.
