

Ian King

I am a 76 year old male [address removed] who has been an IT hobby practitioner now for several years.

I have a website [web address removed]

I also have a jazz web service, hosted both on my intranet and with UDDI Microsoft.

I am a MSDN subscriber.

To a lesser extent, SPAM, having to opt to return to the use of FAX in preference, regarding "The aspect of using online services that concerns me most" views, is the computer virus – in particular, The Blaster Worm, which shuts down the computer 10 minutes after going online, creating each time, a 256k log in the process.

I've asked Microsoft to send me a CD, and it should, with the specialist software to eliminate it, but to no avail, as it happened when I replaced Windows XP Professional with Windows Server 2003 (bought from PC World) operating system on a developing laptop.
