Louise Black

Which single technology has most changed your life? How?

The internet is an important technology which has changed the way I do things, bringing the world to my fingertips. As a university student, the internet has provided me with a source of information and resources and many people think that this is all the internet is for but it clearly is not the case.

I have registered to access my bank details on-line allowing me to pay bills and check my balance without having to go to the bank. I have on a number of occasions booked flights and package holidays on-line, this has saved time going to travel agents and you can decide on the exact package you want. I also shop on-line, for example when a product I want is not available from local shops, I have ordered it on-line and its delivered directly to my door. This not only provides a convenient method of purchasing but can also help sick or disabled people. If you were unable to leave your home due to a disability, the internet provides a connection with the outside world, from your own living room. It allows you to purchase anything like the weekly groceries or even a mobile phone.

The internet has made everything so much more accessible.