

Simon Cole

- 1) Email. Speeds up decision-making and action in business. Makes a dream of contacting the rugby team I run. Spam/porn a big problem though.
- 2) Me, Zone Alarm and Norton AV. IT departments in business, individual owner should be responsible at home. Mustn't lose sight of fact that minimal state control of internet is one of its strengths.
- 3) 7. Everyone is responsible for keeping up to date on safety/IT issues.
- 4) Yes for 18 months Why does Steve Jobs charge UK 20 pence per track more than US?
- 5) The hijacking of legitimate sites to porn. Also music download sites that hijack your modem and charge a premium rate. Usually based in Spain/Thailand/Malaysia ICSTIS is useless even assuming one can get through to complain
- 6) Market forces will bring prices down. Help for pensioners?
- 7) Yes but teach the basic scientific theories first then build to the rest and the brighter pupils will be there ahead of you
- 8) Not sure it's a big problem. It's getting more flexible already. e.g. mp3 is more transportable than CD which in turn was better than vinyl
- 9) Its doing what it always did, providing large amounts of info to a big audience who respect it, just using different methods. We have to check the quality of that information not limit access to it.
- 10) No. I can and do change providers and don't want the hassle of changing addresses.
- 11) Treading water though it is sometimes an effort to keep up. Shame your 2 pages of doors aren't 4
